“Who shall separate us
from the love of Christ? Shall
tribulation, or distress,
or persecution,
or famine, or
nakedness, or peril,
or sword?
For I am persuaded,
that neither death,
nor life,
nor angels,
nor principalities,
nor powers,
nor things present,
nor things to come,
nor height, nor depth,
nor any other creature,
shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus
our Lord.”
(Romans 8:35, 38-39).

Changing Times: Taking Life in Syllables...

I'm too careful and set in my ways, so that when change becomes necessary, I have a mixed bag of emotions to sort through. I understand now that change has been one of the best things that has ever happened to me, even when it doesn't seem to be at the time. What if you got fired from a job that you've hated for years? Look beyond what you can see; sometimes God has to put up roadblocks in our path to help us make the right choices in our lives. He continually walks with us as we fight our daily battles with the world, and although he doesn't prevent us from trouble, he does help us sort it out and make good decisions based on his word and our faith in him as we pray and believe that he can do all things exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think.

Lately, I have had to adjust to less and less available time at home. I keep thinking that soon the clocks will stop for a day, and I will be able to go out back on the porch swing and do what I have needed to do all summer: rest. That's right, rest.

When we have so many other responsibilities to attend to, we forget that even God rested on the seventh day. Jesus slept in the hull of a ship while the storms raged outside. The disciples fretted and saw the problem, while if they had spent more time trusting in God's provision and protection, they would have been able to rest also, and be confident that God would meet their every need.

It is Satan's intention to keep our minds so stirred up with the cares of this life that we get too busy to spend time with God. I am angry at myself, most of all, for not enjoying the simple pleasures in life. I travel back and forth to do the every day routines, and don't even take the time to notice the butterflies. What beauty each and every intricate detail of a butterfly, and we don't take the time to enjoy the simple pleasures? Every day we plan and plan and overschedule and confront adjustments to our schedules. Every day is a constant battle to meet every deadline that we have to meet.

Spending time with God should be as natural and as easy going as watching intricate details of a butterfly's wing. We need to remember that God created us and we have his spirit in us. That is enough to send us all to our knees in humble adoration. That God would want to manifest himself in flesh for our redemption, I can't comprehend.

But, we take life in syllables, and we can only see what we see. Where is our vision? We need to see what God wants to do in us; and we need to be willing and flexible to accept it and embrace his presence in our lives. Let prayer, Bible study, and communion with God be as our natural food; not fit into our already overcrowded schedules: but before all else in our lives, let God be “In the beginning...” Let it continue... (This article first appeared on August 20, 1995.)
